

I changed to XM Satellite Radio because I got tired of listening to local news stations. The local boys do not offer me a variety. They are quick to jam their opinions down your throat and I don't like it. I don't want these same people telling me I can only listen to local weather and traffic. If I live in Illinois, and want to travel to New Orleans, I want to know what the weather and traffic is doing from here to there. Why do the local channels think so many people are thrilled at having the option of Satellite Radio? And if it were available to more people, the local stations would go out of business. Don't take away my right to listen to what I want to listen and subscribe to. If the local stations can't be more competitive to earn more listeners, they shouldn't take it out on those of us that choose to go elsewhere.
